A Summit On Europe Security Is Seen Near

By James Goldsborough PARIS, Dec. 6 (UHT) .- A 35rity and cooperation in Europe became a likelihood today following the second day of meet-ings between the Soviet Communist party leader. Leonid Brezhnev, and Presiden, Valéry

Giscard d'Estaing After today's meeting both sides spoke of "agreement on all essential points," and the Soviet press spokesman, Leonid Zamyatin, said he thought the summit would be held in Helsinki in the first half of next year.

French spokesman Xavier Beauthamps would say only that the two leaders had "personally agreed to the terms of the communique" on the security conference, which will be signed to-

Progress Noted

The wording of the communi-que will probably not name dates and places for the conference, despite the statement by Mr. Zamyatin, but it will indicate that progress is being made in the current negotiations in Genevs, although more progress is necessary to justify the unusually large summit meeting.

The key purpose of the Soviet visit here was to swing the French behind the summit idea, which the Russians have championed since the security confer-ence opened in Helsinki two years ago. While the French made it clear today that they could de-cide nothing bilaterally with the Russians, with French backing the summit is all but a sure thing. It would include all the nations of Europe plus the United States and Canada.

The West Europeans have played the key Western role throughout the negotiations, particularly in refusing to accept the Russians' summit plans without Soviet agreement to negotiate improvements in communiion and con East and West,

The Greek Rift on the Monarchy

PIRAEUS, Greece (NYT) .--"What are we going to do with the king?" said a café owner as he served tiny cups of Turkish coffee. "We don't need him, be's not necessary. If I vote for him now, my children will live under him, I can't vote for someone who will rule my children."
This Sunday, Greeks will decide in a national referendum whether to restore Constantine to the throne or establish a republic. In parliamentary elections last mouth, Piraeus gave he received nationwide. Now, most people in this in-dustrial port city seem to tage with the case owner. They don't think they need a king.

Constantine, who is 34, inherited the throne in 1964. In April of 1967 the government here was overthrown by a conp d'état. Eight months later the king tried to start a countercoup, but when it failed he fled to Italy. In recent years he has been living near London with his wife, Ann-Marie, a Danish princess, and their three children,

New Vote Called

The monarchy was abolished in a referendum last year, but the balloting was widely regarded as illegal. After the junta collapsed over the Cyprus crisis in July, a new vote was called to settle the issue.

The former king still mands significant support in a country where tradition colors many areas of life. "We've always been royalists," said a shopper, her arms laden with packages, "From the time we were small children, my parents always talked about the king." An old woman added: "The title, the grandeur—it' nice. We used to watch him go into the palace, and we'd applaud and shout long live the king." A clerk in a record store defended the monarchy as a buiwark against Communism, "Be-fore they could come to power,' he explained, "they would have to overthrow the king." But after more than seven years of dictatorship, most

Makarios Returns to Cyprus Today, Clerides to Resign

From Wire Dispatches well as mainland Greek armed forces went on a precautionary alert today in preparation for tomorrow's return to Cyprus of Archbishop Makarios.

Acting Cyprus President Glafkos Clerides, who announced that he would resign in favor of the archbishop tomorrow, called on his countrymen to unite behind Archbisbop Makarios to avoid violence.

The Turkish Army also put its occupation forces in Cyprus on special alert today. The Turks have said Archbishop Makarios's return will only complicate efforts to find a lasting solution to the Cyprus crisis. They have warned that they will act to protect Turkish Cypriots still living in Greek areas of the island should they be endangered by renewed communal fighting among Greek Cypriots.

Archbishop Makarios was returning for the first time since he was ousted from the presidency by a July coup. He is now m Athens.

"Dangers are not over yet and a long and difficult course lies ahead," Mr. Clerides told the nation in a speech broadcast over radio and television today. President Since '60

Mr. Clerides said he will resign as president as soon as the archbishop returns to the island nation tomorrow. U.S. Jobless Rate Soars to 6.5% as Layoffs Increase

By Peter Milius

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6 (WP).—The nation's unemployment rate rose steeply last month from 6 to 6.5 per cent of the labor force, the highest it has been since 1961, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported

About six million Americans were unemployed, one out of every 16 in the work force and 1.7 million more than a year ago. A third of them were heads of households and only about half were covered by unemployment insurance. The total unemployed rose 462,000 from October to November, evidence of the speed with which the recession is now developing. The rate is virtually certain to rise still further in December. The bureau's November sampling of the labor force was for the week of Nov. 11 through Nov. 15. Thousands of additional layoffs have been announced since then, most prominently in the auto industry and among its satellites, but in many other sectors of the sagging economy as well. Just today the Ford Motor Co. an-nounced it was laying off 8,700 more workers.

Demand and production have fallen and unemployment has risen faster in the last three months than President Ford and his economic advisers thought it would, and the President has come under increasing pressure to shift away from restraining the economy, in order to cool off inflation, and to move toward pumping it np, to combat recession. He indicated in an interview in Newsweek magazine published earlier this week that he might make such a shift when unemployment reached 6.5 per cent, and aides have said since that a tax cut is one of the stimulants under consideration.

Today White House Press Secretary Ronald Nessen would say only that the new unemployment rate "is a source of great concern," that "the situation is being reviewed" and that "as we decide to take new steps they will be

Mr. Nessen also renewed the President's call for quick passage Congress, before it adjourns, of increased aid to the unemployed. In his economic message October the President propased an expansion of unem-Dyment insurance to cover more workers and cover most workers longer, and expansion as well of the program under which the federal government gives states and cities money to hire the unemployed in public-sector

Unemployment In W. Germany

A 15-Year High NUREMBERG, Dec. 6 (AP). -West German unemployment scared last month to its highest level in 15 years, with 799,300 persons-3.5 per cent of the labor force—out of work, the Federal Labor Office reported today.

The disclosure was certain to bring Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's government under renewed domestic political pressure to invigorate the West German economy. The Federal Labor Office said that the November jobless rate was the highest since the 5.7 per cent recorded in February, 1959, when 1.2 million Germans were unemployed.

Last month's figures were twice as high as those of November last year, when there were 331,800 unemployed, or 1.5 per cent of the

Ford, Schmidt End Economic, Political Talks

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6 (UPI). President Ford and Chancellor Helmut Schmidt of West Germany today ended economic and political talks described by a State Department official as so successful that they should serve as a model to the world.

Arthur Hartman, assistant secretary of state for European affairs, said at a White House news briefing that the talks "could be viewed as a turning point" in American-German economic rela-

Mr. Ford and Mr. Schmidt hit it off so well in their first meeting that the West German invited the President to Bonn and Mr. Ford accepted, he said. No date has been set for the visit. White House press secretary Ronald Nessen released a joint U.S.-West German statement on the talks that listed agreements on matters including energy, the economy, East-West relations and the Atlantic Alliance. "We believe that the example of these talks and the degree of agreement shown in this joint statement is something that we would hope that others in both the developed and less developed world-and indeed among the [oil] producers—would take as a guide to their thinking and activities," Mr. Hariman said, The need for cooperation on solving the oil shortage figured largely in the 1,000-word state-

"Because the extraordinary nature of this economic problem is such that it cannot be solved by the individual efforts of one or two countries, it will require the broadest kind of cooperation," Mr. Hartman said.

"And I think we are more bopeful after these discussions here because we feel there is a great shared view with a partner that has great economic strength and also great political influence," be added

Mr. Hartman also said that Mr. Schmidt would talk next week with President Valery Giscard d Estaing of France, who did not participate in planning by the United States and its allies on handling Arab of producers' demands. The French President will meet Mr. Ford for talks Dec. 14-16 on the Caribbean island of Martinique.

The joint statement listed: Support for Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's plan for an international energy agency to give the Western industrial nations a common front against the oil producers. Mr. Hartman said that Mr. Schmidt had some differing ideas on details, but on the main point agreed with Wash-

H. R. Haldeman told him that Hunt could not be allowed to say things that were damaging to the White House. Coison read today from memo which he said he prepared for his files immediately after talking by telephone with Mr. Haldeman, then the White House chief of staff, on March 23, 1973.

Colson said in the memorandum that Mr. Haldeman asked what representations I had made to Howard Hunt with respect to the commutation of his sentence."

The memo continued that Colson said he had not seen Hunt since the break-in the previous June at Democratio headquarters in the Watergate complex, but that he had talked with Hunt's lawyer two or three

The relatively brief talks near Vladivostok between President Ford and Soviet party leader Leonid Brezhnev are getting a bigger buildup here than any of the three full-fledged U.S.-Soviet summits, according to diplomate. The tone of film documentaries television round-table discussions and press commentaries, they say, is nothing short of rhapsodic.

newspaper, declared in its main headline last Sunday that the summit made a "great contribution to the cause of peace." On the other hand, reservations expressed by some Americans about the proposed limitations on missile and bomber numbers are lambasted daily in the Soviet media as the cries of overt and covert foes of détente. Step Forward

"It is clear to anyone," the government newspaper Izvestia said Wednesday night, "that the Via-divostok summit resched the meximum of what is possible under the current conditions and to reject this new and substantial step forward under the pretext of its allegedly not being big enough means to lapse into demagoguery and try to hurl back Soviet-American relations and the entire process of interna-tional détente to the times of tension and cold war."

Echoing the accord's recent defense by Mr. Ford and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, the Russians are saying that the principal objective of the pact is "to prevent the arms race from spiraling up further."

Drug, Ultraviolet Treatment Show Results

Therapy for Psoriasis Is Being Developed

By Lawrence K. Altman BOSTON, Dec. 6 (NYT).-Skin doctors at the Massachusetts General Hospital have reported that they achieved "complete clearing" of psoriasis in 50 patients with a new ultraviolet light device and a naturally occurring drug that Egyptians and Indians have used since ancient times. Because the light devices were made for this experimental study. the method is now limited to two hospitals—one here, one in Vienna—and will not be gener-ally available for at least a year, the doctors said at a news conference Wednesday.

The new therapy "is not a cure for psoriasis," which is a genetic disease inherited m a poorly understood pattern, the doctors said. Yet, they added, continuing therapy has kept patients free of psoriests skin patches for up to 10 months. An Austrian, Dr. Klaus Wolff, has recorded the same results nationts at the Allgemeines Krankenbaus in Vienna, according to the Boston team.

As a result, new hope of a relatively quick, uncomplicated treatment is offered to the 75 million of all ages in the world who are afflicted with the incurable, chronic, relapsing disease. The name psoriasis is derived from the Greek word for itching. The red, scaly patches of psoriasis that characteristically appear on the scalp, elbows, knees, back and buttocks, but that can occur anywhere on tha body, seldom cause death. But their supearance embarrasses, and leads to serious psychological problems for many patients. Psoriasis can, for example, limit sexual intercourse for those with patches in the genital area. In others, the psoriasis clears after long, costly hospitalization,

San Francisco May Remove 'Stub' Freeway After 15 Years

(NYT).—San Francisco has its Golden Gate Bridge, its Coit Tower and its bay. It also has the Stub.

The Stub is the mile-long unfinished Embarcadero Freeway, begun about two decades ago, stopped almost midway by a citizens' revolt in 1959, and left jutting into the sky unfinished. San Francisco is now considering the spending of millions of dollars to tear it down.

The freeway has been the focus of controversy since it was pro-

A few days ago, city, state and federal agencies offered a $59million intricate highway plan designed to solve a number of thorny transportation problems. Among the plan's chief features is the tearing down of the Stub. The Emharcadero Freeway was supposed to line the waterfront much as the highways in New

Then came the citizens' revolt. Businessmen, community groups and celebrities banded together to oppose the project, which was then about one-third completed. They complained that it was blocking the view of San Francisco Bay. One day, the construction workers did not return, and the Em-barcadero project stopped. The ramp yawns open after the last exit, and all that stops cars from driving off is a steel railing at the squared-off end.

Through the years, citizens' groups continued to criticize the freeway. City Supervisor Dianne nstein said, "I'm determined that the freeway come down if I bave to become totally grayhaired in the process."

The new proposal was made by the City Planning Commission in consultation with several other city agencies, the California Department of Transportation, the Metropolitan Transportation Com-mission and the U.S. Department of Transportation.

The Vladivostok Accord

The details of the tentative accord on strategic arms negotiated in Viadivostok are becoming known, and the developing debate on it suggests at once that it is generally a worthy agreement, that it is being well received in Congress, and that it still needs closer attention. The agreement would limit strategic launchers (missiles and bombers) to 2,400 on each side, limit multiwarhead (MIRV) missiles to 1,300 each, run for 10 years, and require further negotiations on follow-on limitations and possible reductions. The United States and the Soviet Union hope to wrap it up by the time Mr. Brezhnev comes to Washington next spring.

Even those initially skeptical of the Viadivostok accord have had to concede these positive features of it. It confirms in the two crucial categories of total launchers and MIRV launchers the principle of equality, thus greatly reducing either side's fear that one of them can somehow gain strategic advantage. It establishes limits where there had been none, thus precluding an openended arms race. It ensures that earlier SALT agreements will become all but permanent, thus foreclosing a major source of Soviet-American anxiety. It further ensures, according to President Ford last Monday, that strategic arms budgets will not go up except as a consequence of inflation. It symbolizes and advances the Soviet and American commitment to détente—a result which can feed back into other aspects of policy. This is not to say that many people, ourselves included, do not have some serious reservations about the Ford-Brezhnev handiwork. Chief among them is the undisputed fact that the tentative accord bears the potential for pushing ahead certain aspects of the arms race. The newly proposed ceilings not only set upper limits but in effect license buildups to the very high levels of these limits. It is the American "obligation" to reach them, Mr. Ford said. But is it? Why should not those ceilings be regarded as levels to be lowered by further immediate negotiations, rather than as goals which must be met no matter what?

We can understand why Mr. Ford might wish to impress the Russians with a demonstration of confidence that he has the political capacity to get the new weapons from Congress if he has to. But that should not lock him in. Suppose, say, 15 senators conditioned their support for a Vladivostoktype treaty on an administration pledge to go right back into negotiations. The peculiar quality of SALT diplomacy at this stage is that its implementation will be spread over 10 years and will be subject, via the annual budgetary process, to regular congressional review. This enables-indeed, it enforcesthe participation of Congress in SALT diplomacy in a profound way.

There is another problem. The new guidelines to SALT negotiators authorize Soviet MIRVs to match those of America. The "throw-weight" of the biggest Soviet launchers will let them pack a lot more MIRV warheads than do American launchers. This could lead the United States to fear a Soviet first strike against American land-hased missiles. This poees its own dilemma for American policy. President Ford said last Monday that if the Pentagon and the Congress perceived Soviet throw-weight as a threat, they could match it. That, of course, would only give Moscow more of the same first-strike jitters felt in Washington; it would make the destabilization mutual. There are alternatives: either the United States could shift a larger part of the American nuclear force to sea or make landbased missiles less vulnerable. Or Washington could move toward a determination that, given the invulnerability of other launchers and the implausibility of a general nuclear war, a Soviet advantage in throw-weight simply could not be converted into either a strategic or a political edge. We trust there will be further debate on this

On yet another score, Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash, guarantees further debate. He is not so much concerned that an agreement on the lines of Vladivostok would be unsafe as that it would permit excessively high levels of total launchers and MIRV launchers and would cost excessive billions. He believes—and this is as hard to disprove as to demonstrate—that the administration could have negotiated a "better" agreement. Mr. Jackson may well ask the Senate to repudiate the Vladivostok accord and to instruct the President to go back to the table with Mr. Brezhnev. Whether he can muster a majority for this purpose, which would amount to a major humiliation to Mr. Ford, seems doubtful. But the administration cannot fail to ignore the larger chance Mr. Jackson might have later to collect 34 Senate votes to block a treaty which he thought was unwise. Meanwhile, we note that Sen. Jackson is a serious student of strategy as well as politics, and we look forward to hearing him make his case. The case for strategic arms control deserves the best-which is to say the most thoughtful and responsible - presentation of all points of view.

The Archbishop Returns

day of President Makarios, nearly live months after his ouster in a coup ordered by Greece's disintegrating military dictatorship, is unquestionably a symbol of both moral justice and constitutional order. But even some of his supporters fear that the archbishop's homecoming at this time will diminish prospects for fruitful negotiations looking toward a peaceful political, economic and social reconstruction of the island repoblic.

Turkey says flatly that the archbishop's return will mean suspension even of the negotiations between acting President Glafkos Clerides and his Turkish-Cypriot counterpart, Rauf Denktash, that have made some progress on the colossal humanitarian problems arising from Turkey's military blitz last August. With winter rapidly approaching, any hiatus in these talks could be indescribably tragic for many among the 200,000 Cypriots driven from their homes by the

> If Turkey launched yet another military intervention, it would surely bring war with Greece in addition to destroying all hope for restoring peace and viability to Cyprus. It is incumbent on Archbishop Makarios to exhibit toward both his Greek-Cypriot enemies and the Turkish community a spirit of conciliation and compromise that has never before characterized his conduct of office. And Turkey's allies must urge restraint on Ankara with far greater force than they displayed last summer.

> It would improve chances for a Cyprus settlement enormously if Turkey could move out of its political and constitutional crisis and return a strong government with a working majority in parliament. In the existing climate, only such a government in Ankara can make the necessary concessions. even as only the kind of strong government Greece now has under Premier Caramanlis can negotiate realistically and win acceptance at home for a far from ideal solution. Greek Vote on Monarchy

What must be clear to all Greeks by now is that the difference between monarchy and republic is in itself much less important than that between dictatorship and democracy. If King Constantine is not recalled to his throne on Sonday-which is still much the most probable result—it will be mainly because the majority of Greeks are now convinced, rightly or wrongly, that monarchy in their country is a danger to democracy. . .

At least the authenticity of Sunday's verdict will be hard to dispute, since Mr. Caramanlis's government is maintaining an attitude of scrupulous neutrality. Whether monarchial or republican, Greece is likely to remain a parliamentary democracy, and the existence of a clear parliamentary majority for Mr. Caramanlis's party should ensure that this system gets off to a healthy new

Kissinger and His Mounting Difficulties

By James Reston

WASHINGTON.-Henry Kissinger seems a bit depressed days, and no wonder. Things are not going well for him in the Congress. He got very little belp from Brezhner at Vladivostok on the deepening crisis in the Middle East. His latest trip to Peking was less productive than any of the others, and even where he felt genuine progress was made—on the strategic arms talks and the Japanese visit-he got a rather poor

The congressional problem is a mixture of things. His prolonged absences from the capital carry him beyond the peremptory summonses of the elders on Capitol Hill, a jealous bunch. His relations with the Foreign Committees of the Senate and House are good, but other committees and even some of the leaders feel short-changed. This won't be solved even after Kissinger invents the 48-hour day, which he's working on, so the general admiration for his achievements is mixed with some resentment

Also, there are some honest differences over arms control policy. foreign aid, the administration's trade bill, the Greek-Turkish-Cyprus controversy, Israel and the Middle East, and what many legislators regard as the excessively high cost of Kissinger's policy of détente with the Soviet

Meany Is Angry

George Meany of the AFL-CIO is angry with him for pressing a trade bill which Meany is convinced will add substantially to the mounting unemployment totals. George Ball thinks his step-by-step diplomacy is not working in the Middle East. Sen. Scoop Jackson is sniping at his arms deal with Brezhnev. Rep. John Brademas, an increasingly influential member of the Democratic leadership in the House, has broken with him on Turkey, and even when the congressional leaders support him, they don't have enough followers to save him from the rising tide of criticism.

In short, as "de Lawd" said in "Green Pastures," "Even being God ain't no bed of roses." After a long period of excessive praise. Kissinger is now in a phase of excessive blame, and what's more important, the trend of events seems to be running against his policies in the Middle East.

He tried to persuade the Israelia to deal with Jordan last spring on the problem of the Palestinian refugees, and warned that Yassir Arafat and the Palestine Liberation Organization would greatly complicate the whole peace movement if they didn't.

His nightmare is that diplomatic progress will not keep up with the arms buildup in the area, leading to a fifth Arab-Israeli war and another oil embargo that will not only weaken

Israeli Formula

Israel's formula for this is more U.S. arms—over $2 billion a year for at least three years—but Kissinger's emphasis is not on more arms but on more negotiations, and, one gathers, on more gradual Israeli withdrawals from the territory they captured in the last

This is not yet an open rift between the United States and Israel, but it is building up behind the scenes and will undoubtedly be the subject of intense discussion when the Israeli foreign minister, Yigal Allon, is in Washington next week.

Kissinger tried to get Brezhnev and Gromyko to cooperate with the United States in speeding np the Middle East negotiations to avoid a crisis, but without suc-They would like to get the talks into a Geneva conference. The official view here is that singer to answer, yes or no.

This clearly did not advance the secretary's policy or raise his spirits and neither did his talks in Peking. He was asked when he got there about recorts in the U.S. papers that relations between the two countries had "cooled." He replied that they were the same in Washington as before and was told that Peking felt the same way.

But his talk with Chou En-lat was quite different this time. It was much more guarded and was suddenly cut off after a half hour, and not apparently because Chou-En lai was too ill to carry on. Indeed, he seemed physically about as before, in complete control but perhaps not in

There have been reports of a conflict within the Chinese government over Chou En-lai's policy of limited reconciliation with Washington, and even of a faction within the Chinese hierarchy wanting a less hostile attitude or even a reconciliation with the Soviet Union.
Kissinger apparently got very little information on this, but the position of Chou En-lei remains a mystery. It is assumed here that, since President Ford was invited to visit Peking next year, the leadership question under Mao Tse-tung may be settled by the time he arrives, since it. would be odd to invite the President to negotiate with a deputy

Anyway, the puzzles and problems seem to be piling up for the secretary of state, both at home and abroad, and his schedule leaves him little respite. In the few days since his month ahroad, he has either been testifying on Capitol Hill or dealing with Prime Minister Trudeau of Canada, or Chancellor Schmidt of West Germany.

Next week, it will be Foreign Minister Allon of Israel, then off to Brussels for a NATO meeting, then back to Washington and off again to Martinique to negotiate with the President of France. Even airline pilots get time off, but not Henry.

Brezhnev saw President Ford in Vladivostok. Now he is the guest of President Giscard d'Estaing. Next week the French chief of state flies to Martinique and his first talk with Ford. All three what is known as "working visits." The Brezhnev-Ford dialogue concinded an accord between the two superpowers that is supposed to have put a "cap" on the arms race although skeptics think it may only have designated the next set of targets to aim at. When the Vladivostok conversa-

Peking didn't think much of it-or of Brezhnev's unfriendly speech directed right afterward to China.

Mrs. Hearst, 92, Widow of Publisher

NEW YORK, Dec. 6 (NYT) -Mrs William Randolph Hearst, 92, widow of the publisher who died in 1951, died here yesterday. As the wife of a man who became a legend in his lifetime, Mrs. Hearst was associated in the public mind with the fortunes of the newspaper and magazine publisher.

Yet she did not live in the shadow of her husband, nor was her identity submerged. As wife and mother, as e gracious figure in society here and in Europe, as an enthusiastic worker in both world wars and as a leader of charitable causes in New York, her home city, she combined a variety of careers.

When Mr. Hearst died in August, 1951, his estrangement from his wife, for many years an open secret, was confirmed. The fitting of the will disclosed separation stipulations dated as far back as 1921 and 1927.

BONN, Dec. 6 (NYT).-An American soldier who has been in prison for more than two months for refusing to get a haircut has been set free because the Army discovered it had tapped a conversation about him by his lawyer—after swearing in court that it had not.

Spec. 4 Louis Stokes, convicted in Mannheim on Sept. 18 on two counts of disobeying orders and sentenced to reduction in rank to private fined and given four months in jail, was freed Nov. 23 from the stockade in Fort Riley. A Collection With A Difference

By Michael Gibson

DARIS, Dec. 6 (IHT).-Represented in Paris at the Orangerie des Tuileries (to March 3) by over 170 paintings and sculptures, the Peggy Guggenheim Foundation is not a collection like so many others. Aside from the fact that it constitutes a remarkable sampling of the art of this century (from cubism to the present day, more or less, it is the product of a long labor of love, and deserves acclamation

Both foolhardy and wise, well counseled in any event and favored by circumstances, Peggy Guggenheim assembled the bulk of ber original collection in Paris in 1940, at a time when everybody was expecting the German Army to turn up at any moment, end at a total cost of $40,000.

Picasso and Braque, Jean Gris and Léger, Gleizes, Metzinger, Marcousis and Marcel Duchamp among others represent cubist painting Raymond Duchamp-Villon's extraordinary "Horse," metaphor of the transition to machine power, along with pieces by Lipchitz and Laurens, represents cubist sculpture.

Prewar Abstraction Kandinsky, Mondrian, Delaunay, Malevitch, El Lissitzky, Helion etc., illustrate various forms of prewar abstraction, while sculpture is admirably represented by Brancusi and by Arp.

From "Baiser" (1927) by Max Ernst, part of the Guggenheim collection on view in Paris.

Some outstanding Chirices and a large array of paintings by Max Ernst, slong with works by Klee, Miró, Dali, and 21 other painters and sculptors, offer a broad spectrum of the tendencies subsumed under the words surrealism and dadaism.

All the foregoing could be described as the first part of the exhibition-the works Mrs. Guggenheim was able to take out of France, thanks to the initiative of a number of resourceful peowhen she returned to the United States.

Shortly after her return, Peggy Guggenheim opened a gallery in New York which was destined to be one of the important influences of the period: Art of This Century. The inaugural display was devoted to her recent acquisitions and, she says, created a sensation, with thousands of people coming to see it.

But the importance of the gal-

This, then, is not a collection like all the others. For one thing, art is not a hobby for Peggy She understands Guggenheim. the stuff and loves it and has made it ber life. The spirit in which it was acquired and the circumstances of its acquisition preserve it from any of the irritating ambiguities which hover about some of the great collections of our day. Mrs. Guggen-heim is not trying to surround herself with an aura of good taste. She is guided by her en-thusiasm and sound judgment and sticks her neck out. Her choice of Pollock for instance was vindicated in time.

The result of this enthusiasm that it illuminates even the duller works of the collection and, like a rising sun, chases the murky connotations of acquisitiveness, prestige and mere owner-ship quite out of one's mind.

THE ART MARKET

Pessimists, Optimists and the Psychologists

By Souren Melikian

PARIS, Dec. 6 (URT).-The moral of a sale in Paris this week seems to be that the urevailing pessimism is affecting the prices for the better works of art. But a few optimists are gambling on what seems to be second rate work-a phenomenon whose explanation belongs more in the domain of psychologists than in that of art market analysis.

The sale took place Monday at the Hotel Drouot with Antoine Ader, assisted by expert Charles Ration, selling Egyptian and Mediterranean antiquities, as well as Renaissance objects from all over Europe. Except for two rare carvings from Syria, few objects were out of the ordinary. To everyone's surprise, the sale went smoothly.

Inevitably the archaeological objects did less well than those from the Renaissance period This is because the market is more limited and archaeological objects —in good times as well as bad often pose more difficult ques-

There were 19 lots from ancient Egypt. The first, a fritted earth washabti (a funerary figure representing a mummy), 7.5 centi-meters high, was cheap at 580 francs. But a Safte-period head of a bronze cat (4.5 centimeters high), which had probably been cut off from a figure of a seated cat was well sold at 696 francs.

A Stela

After this contradictory start came the top part of a limestone funerary stels, showing Os'ris, Horus and Isis in front of an altar. The deeply engraved design was vigorous but the fragmentary condition of the object was too obvious not to be a detriment by collectors' standards. The real value hinges on the hieroglyphic inscription-which had not been translated So 5,800 francs was a good price under the circum-

A few more washabtis came up all of them of fritted earth-why were they called "faience" in the catalogue?—once a giorious tur-quoise-greenish blue and now somewhat faded. Two of these (each 13.5 centimeters high) made respectively 1,160 francs and 1,044, perhaps a 10 to 20-per-cent drop in price over last year, Still they sold for high prices in view of their indifferent quality.

Also well sold were two matching alabaster vases, the cover of one shaped like a human head and the cover of the other like an ape's head. According to the ex-pert's description, they represent the deities Amset and Hapt. Their chief merit lay in a somewhat surrealistic appearance. In particular, the ape was a striking anticipation of Max Ernst's famous "Fortrait of the Artist as an Ape." This is definitely what helped the pair reach 6,960 francs. They had obviously been repolished-such an unpleasant, brandnew look usually puts off collec-

The price for the vases was entirely too much when compared with the fritted earth gourd (13.4 centimeters high) that came up next—a masterpiece of ancient Egyptian pottery. Its short neck was flanked by two very small ape figures. The object is not rare but its perfect balance and well-preserved torquoise blue glaze made it highly desirable, a. small chip on the rim of the neck notwithstanding.

Two Masks

Two hideous funerary masks, looking battered, dusty and "old" (rather than ancient) rose to 1,740 rancs, probably because they had big black eyes and eyebrows with a sort of cheap Chagall-style expressionism that greatly appeals to interior decorators.

Another big price was the 9,280 francs paid for a polychrome wood sarcophagus (77 centimeters long) from the Ptolemaic period. The hieroglyphs—again not trans-lated—may have accounted for the high price—there were at least two Egyptologists at the

All told the Egyptian art did very well. While one or two pieces went for 20 to 30 per cent of what they might have made last year, the majority were sold for good

Other Objects

The situation was different with the other antiquities. The rarer pieces sold for moderate, rather low prices. A very special case was a small granite bust carved in late Roman style, bordering on the early Byzantine manner, It had been fitted with a porphyry head, as the catalogue carefully pointed out. Mr. Ratton, whom most connoisseurs consider to have a very good eye in these matters, listed the bust as "Egypt" without stating the period. In auction-room language, this means he had doubts regarding. the authenticity but was reluctant to say that the bust was a fake. The bust was laid on the block at 100 francs, a low starting fig-ure considering that the first hid amounced by the auctioneer at Drouot is expected to be multiplied by two or three. The bust nearly went for 250 france when two unidentified young men, seemingly unfamiliar with French salesroom methods, got into the bidding. They bought it for 2,700 francs. The people in the room snickered. But the buyers were doubtless right-it was a perfectly good Egyptian bust of the 2d or 3d century which had

It was sold for a whacking 9,860 francs-a price certainly not justified by the aesthetic merit of the flimsy carving in cheap-look-ing alabaster.

Persian Art

Then came the Persian antiquities. A complete flop, The is to be expected when the room is not filled with Persian dealers trying their best to boost prices and create an atmosphere cl rollicking prosperity.

A bronze ewer (32 contimeter: high) which was 12th to 13th century according to the catalogueit was, in fact, a century older as evidenced by the graphic 515.0 of its inscriptions—was sold for 2,090 francs; exactly what it really worth on the market.

"Good" prices were paid again

when European works from the Middle Ages and the Renaissance came up. Here again the best sold hadly, the worst splendidly. A masterpiece of Limoges paint-ed enamels, a dish (20 centimeters in dismeter) had been estimated at 11,420 francs. The selling price of 9,190 francs can only be partly accounted for by the poor con-dition of part of the rim. Two small plaques in Limoges enamels heavily restored—were bought by the Musée de Limoges for only 1,740 francs And an 11th-century bronze Christ (125 centimeters high) from the Mosan area, the second best piece in the sale (after the Syrian basalt head) went for 8,632 frames. The bronze had lost its left hand but the quality of the carving was superb. I can't help feeling it would have made three times as much las:

year in London In contrast, I was amazed at the price paid for one of the least desirable lots in the sale. This was a huge bronze bust of Pope Pins V. Mr. Ration, who knows Renaissance bronzes well gave it no period-a way of ceelaring it later than the period suggested by the style, which was 17th century. Connoisseurs at the auction said that this piece was one of several cepies made in the 19th century iron the model. It started at 1.400 francs and finally sold for 15,860 The next piece, from the same part of the world, sold still better although it was not so fine. This

Such optimism—such long-shot bidding—falls outside the competence, as I said above, of the art market analyst.

This selection of more than 70 works spanning the period-1900-1962 is a tribute to one of the most acclaimed members of the School of Paris. The highlights are "Guaridon" (1911) at the apex of cubism, the looser shapes of "Le Valse" (1920), and the "Pink Tablecloth" (1938). But now, after the sound and fury of French avant-gardism has died down, Braque's line, shades, his tapestry effects and halfabstracted structures make it classicist at heart.

At a time when much set rests on convoluted thinking and materials, the clarity and nobility of mere drawing and graphics are refreshing. Orlik, Jettmer, Moser and so on, who were thought revolutionary at the turn of the century, while producing works of the highest quality, in this show sometimes seem periodbound, But Klimt, with 11 splen-did drawings, transcends his time. His pencil reveals worlds of intensity. Schiele in two-drawings also achieves great expression with few marks. ...

Guido Strazza, Il Segno, 4. Via Capolecase, Rome, to Dec. 20. Strazza's stehings form the elements of a book on the theme of "Dutch Horizons," and are radiant miniatures. A painter of delicately tuned abstractions, Stranza here also displays his trials and errors, the stages of etchings surrounding his book, and mentions the name of the crafteman who cooperated with him—both unusual gestures to-day when too many artists send their rough sketches into printshops and put their signature under products created entirely by skilled artisans.

But the original plan can be bought by the coilector who can have anyone duplicate it or do it himself. He can also just hang up the framed plan. Here Miller's programmed pieces, because of the roughness of the string and the not completely aligned letters, have a homemade, craftsy look about them (but are not nearly as haunting as the much looser oblowers) and this might provide an intriguing foil to another timely quality, the reasoning behind them, which, as Miller says, "Is all about systems ... about linguistics." Sensationalizing the Dreyfus Affair

By John Walker

ONDON, Dec. 8 (IHT) .- The pantomime season, that time grotesque fooling and gaudy endor, has begun a little early s year with a production that he best be described as an ex-vaganza, a bombastic and fligate piece of work.

t is a vulgar, rancous evening ged with great lavishness and ast that wouldn't disgrace a ild be much more enjoyable it were not being presented the National Theatre as a y worthy of serious attention, Ellis's "Grand Manoeuvres," ich deals with the Drevius at a time when Watercate can l sicken, it may be salutery recall far more accomplished er-ups from the past, if only a reminder that politicians e always appealed to patrio-n and loyalty while indulging cynical power struggles and re used the excuse of national urity to deprive individuals of he program quotes Hannah ndt's remark that the Dreyfus air was "a kind of dress earsal for the performance of own time." The events depictin the play remain shocking, Dreyfus, the Jewish French ny captain, is arrested and tried selling military secrets to the rmans, found guilty on filmsy dence and sent to Devil's and. The subsequent retrials, h the judges preferring to ore the truth and the army ging documents to prove its

Yet the play does little to H- broad as the production. Paul huminate these events or to make Rogers is a coarsely amusing Major any attempt to investigate the characters of those involved or to explain how and why they happened. It offers a cartoon-style history lesson, with stereotyped villains and heroes. The style of the play is based on satirical posters and cartoons of the period. Indeed, one scene—other-wise irrelevant to the main action and distracting in its length—is an animated version of a pair of drawings by Caran d'Ache showing a family mealitime dis-rupted by discussion of the Dreyfus affair, with fights breaking out and furniture being over-turned. Other scenes, too, draw directly on postcards and car-toons. But while they were side comments at the time on the main event taking place in the courts, the play offers nothing more than these lokey reactions.

Michael Blakemore's production has all the vigor and pace one expects from him. But his energy has gone in disguising the nature of the play, dressing it up to distract the mind. Tiny scenes are interpolated for no other rea-son than to provide the op-portunity for spectacle or for the employment of actors.

Madame Dreyfus has only to form a sentimental tablean at the front of the stage with her two young children, reading an appeal she has written to the Pope, than the lights go up at the back of the stage and there is the Pope tearing up the letter. It is a scene that would not have been missed in an evening that lasts

The acting is as vigorous and

Rogers is a coarsely amusing Major Henry, the suny's dim intelligence officer who acts as narrator, and Mark Dignam provides a splendid caricature of pomposity and corruption as the war minister, General Mercier, Alan MacNaughton as Dreyfus is not given the opportunity to be anything but a passive martyr, yet conveys a quiet and moving dignity amid the melodramatic vaudevillian rampagings around him.

The evening ends with a shock. Dreyfus is presented with the Légion d'Honneur (fourth class), turns to the andience to show the yellow Star of David on his jacket; his family gather tearfully around him while above the image of the crucified Christ fades to be re-placed by a Nazi soldier wearing a gas mast. But this shocks not so much for what it represents but because nothing in the play has prepared one dramatically for this moment. Instead of being moving, if becomes a cheap, sensational effect.

Although, I suppose, cheapness is not an accusation that should be flung at the National Theatre. Not in a season where the keynote has been conspicuous and cessary expenditure,

At the Albery, Dorothy Tutin is giving a fine performance to an excellent revival of J.M. Barrie's "What Every Woman Knows." Entertainment in New York

NEW YORK, Dec. 6 (IHT).-This is how critics for The New York Times rate new films and stage productions:

Plays

"In the Boom Boom Room" by David Rabe had its first production at the hands of Joseph Papp and the New York Shakespeare Festival last year-it was one of the season's most controversial plays, Clive Barnes says, heing both praised and maligned. As Pappand the author admitted at the time, it needed more work. "Papp sent it back to the drawing board"—and it had a production out of New York. Now it has reopened in New York at the Anspacher. "Something like 25 per cent of the play is new," Barnes says, but "the result is not that much different. What was once a bad production of a bad play has become a good production of a moderately bad play," The heroine is Chrissy, "a largely marticulate girl with a naturally sweet nature... one of nature's losers." Ellen Greeve is "brilliant" in the lead, "touchingly vulnerable and wholly credible." Barnes finds the rest of the cast (including Tom Quinn as Chrissy's father and Gwendolyn Brown as a dance captain with lesbian tendencies, good. But the central fault of the play remains: the heroine "is just not very interesting. She is a cliché expert testifying on life. Robert Hedley directed.

Films

"Death and the Devil," a new film by Stephen Dwoskin, is based on the German play of the same name by Frank Wedekind. "Aside Nora Sayre, "the director has achiered a style of camera work that results in a riot of duliness." The plot is clear only if one knows Wedekind's original text. which explains that the action occurs in a brothel. "Although the delivery of the dialogue is triumphantly static," Sayre says, "the film's at its worst when the talking heads fall silent. Throughout, the camera rarely stops moving .. Pores and nostrils are carefully examined, and Mr. Dwoskin has an affection for collarbones and foreheads...It's a dramatic from butchering the text." says

BIG BOARD" STOCKS AT P/E's UNDER 3

with RECORD EARNINGS forecast in 1974

Value Line looks at

In today's deeply depressed stock market, scores of stocks are stance, it would take you just minutes to check which stocks have selling et earnings multiples which would heve been hard to current P/E's balow 2 or 3 or 4 or 5.)

But many of these "low" P/E stocks have weak aarnings, or are reletively obscure, and therefore offer little attraction to serious Investors who now want to line up their "re-antry" strategy for a mathan at any time since 1949. The unweighted Value Line Comcording to our estimetes, heve record-high earnings in sight for lieve, is the time to gat ready, with deliberation, so that you won't 1974. Here is just a sampling:

Ampco-Pittsburgh Corp. Continental Copper Colt Industries Cyclops Corp. LTV Corp.

Lessons Corp. Occidental Petroleum Reynolds Metals Tesero Petroleum Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel

Each of these stocks is selling at less than 3 times its estimated 1974 earnings. The average price of these stocks works out to be about $13, against average 1974 estimated earnings of nearly $6.97 per share—for an average P/E of 2.3 (Value Line Survey 10/11/74).

Each of these stocks, according to Valua Line estimates, is expected to achieve all-time record earnings in 1974. On average, we expect this year's per share earnings to be some 85% highar than in the best previous earnings year of each of the stocks.

Each of these companies has sizeable sales. The 1973 sales of the smallest exceeded $90 million. The average sales of all ten last year were well over half a billion dollars.

scale redundancies or closure. Mr. Benn said he was satisfied his immediate plans would enable Leyland to keep going.

Ee added: "In response to the company's request for support for their investment program. the government also intends to introduce longer term arrange-ments, including a measure of public ownership."

Full Take-Over Seen

Many observers believed the government would become majority shareholder in British Leyland, and there was speculation that the firm might be headed for full nationalization. London newspapers carried reports that the company needed assive cash aid and that perhaps hundreds of millions of pounds of state money might have to be injected into its future investment program.

Questioned by the opposition about his plans, Mr. Benn said: "If the government is required to pay a substantial sum of money into British Leyland it is quite right that the taxpayer, in making that contribution, should get with it an appropriate measure of public control and accountability. I don't think the taxpayer should be put at special disadvantages compared with other investors." British Levland shares are at an all-time low and were quoted today at six and a half pence. Two years ago they were worth more than 50 pence.

Mr. Benn said a high-level team would be appointed to advise the government about the company's situation and prospects and would left wing said in a statement that it was an attempt to undermine Labor's commitment to a massive extension of public ownership. Sir Don, according to informed sources, believes that industry has been unnecessarily hysterical with some of its "sloganizing about back-door nationalization." He feels the government has as much right as any other institution to demand a stake in return for handing out its money.

Sir Don has also said he supports the idea of Britain's mixed economy, a part-public, part-private system which Mr. Wilson has also pledged himself to pre-

Norway Tax Shocks Firms

LONDON, Dec. 6 (AP-DJ).— Norway's reported proposal for a new tax structure for its North Sea oil properties, with an upper limit of 90 per cent, has "really rocked the oil companies." oil industry sources said today. The companies are "searching for the motivation" in the proposals which they fear are designed to discourage development on the Norwegian North

The Norwegian government is said to have stated, however, that the proposals are tentative and open to negotiation.

The oil companies reportedly have been asked to present their comments on the proposals on Dec. 13. The Norwegian Ministries of Industry and Finance would then make their recommendations to the cabinet for a new

Under the reported proposal, the normal Norwegian tax rate of 51 per cent would apply to profits on all oil sold at $3.73 a barrel. Profits on oil sold at a higher price would be subject to an additional 40-per-cent tax. Added to royaltles, this would amount to more than 90 per cent of profits being taxed, industry

With the possible exception of Phillips Petroleum Co., which began development before inflation began to run away with exploration and development costs no oil company can possibly sell Norwegian oil as low as $3.73 a barrel, the sources said.

The market got off to a had start following news that November's unemployment rate soared to 8.5 from 6 per cent in October. Brokers said that although the November rise had been mostly anticipated the fact that it is the highest rate in 13 years underscores the continuing softness in the economy.

The market made a feeble attempt to hold its losses to a modest level around midday when the Dow Jones industrial average levelled off, down about 5 points. But the downward trend picked up momentum in mid-afternoon as several companies announced more layoffs and plant closings, brokers noted With recession worries continuing to dominate investor thinking. "the only way to get the market out of the doldrums is

N.Y. Bank Loans Increase

By John H. Allan

NEW YORK, Dec. 8 (NYT) .-Business loans at major New York City banks continued to increase in the week ended Wednesday, but their rise was smaller than a week earlier, the Pederal Reserve Bank of New York disclosed vesterday.

The money supply increased slightly, and banks in the Federal Reserve System became somewhat less cramped for reserves that they must hold and they also reduced their borrowing from the Fed. The increase in commercial and industrial loans during the last banking week was the ninth in the last 10 weeks. Over this period, husiness loans have expanded $1.39 billion, and they have risen more than $3.5 billion since midyear, well above the $1.3 hillion increase in the corresponding period of 1973. .

Of the $3.5-billion increase in loans over the last five months. more than $1.1 billion came from borrowing by gas and electric utility companies. Again during the latest banking week, these

CAB Inaction

LONDON, Dec. 6 (AP).-The British governement has lodged a new protest with the U.S. Civil Aeronautics Board about its delay in giving a British charter airline-Laker Airways-permis-sion to start a "walk-on walkoff" Skytrain service across the Atlantic, the airline said yesterday. Preddie Laker, company chairman, said in a statement that the two-year delay since the application was made has cost Britain $200 million in lost fares and tourist spending in this country.

He said his airline had invested $71 million in buying three American DC-10 jumbo jets for Skytrain, which would offer first come-first served, unreserved seats -on regularly scheduled flights.

The airline bas made several approaches to the British government in the past and several official protests were made, be

Last October Laker filed sismillion suits in Washington, alleging that four major airlines are preventing it starting the new low-fare service. The suits were filed in the U.S. district court against Pan American, Trans World Airlines, British Airways and British Caledonian.

Many U.S. Businessmen See Wage and Price Curbs in '75

By Michael C. Jensen

About a dozen businessmen were interviewed as they convened yesterday for the annual meeting of the National Association of Manufacturers at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. Some said prices are being raised in anticipation of controls, so that they would not be frozen for an extended period at possibly unprofitable levels. A small minority of the officials interviewed said they think inflation is easing and the pressure for controls might dissipate by next

Curbs 'Perhaps Probable'

Most, however, echoed the sentiments of James Henderson, a vice-president of Shell Oil Co. who said he thinks widespread controls are "possible, perhaps probable." The president of a large equipment manufacturing company in the Middle West, who asked for anonymity, said be believes controls are almost inevitable. "I suspect we're going to have controls by June and that's generally what businessmen think," he said. "There's no doubt in my mind that there has been accel-of controls." The head of a large consumer product company in California agreed. "Like many others, I'm afraid they may be on the way by the middle of 1975," he said

Brussels Bank Estimates Loss

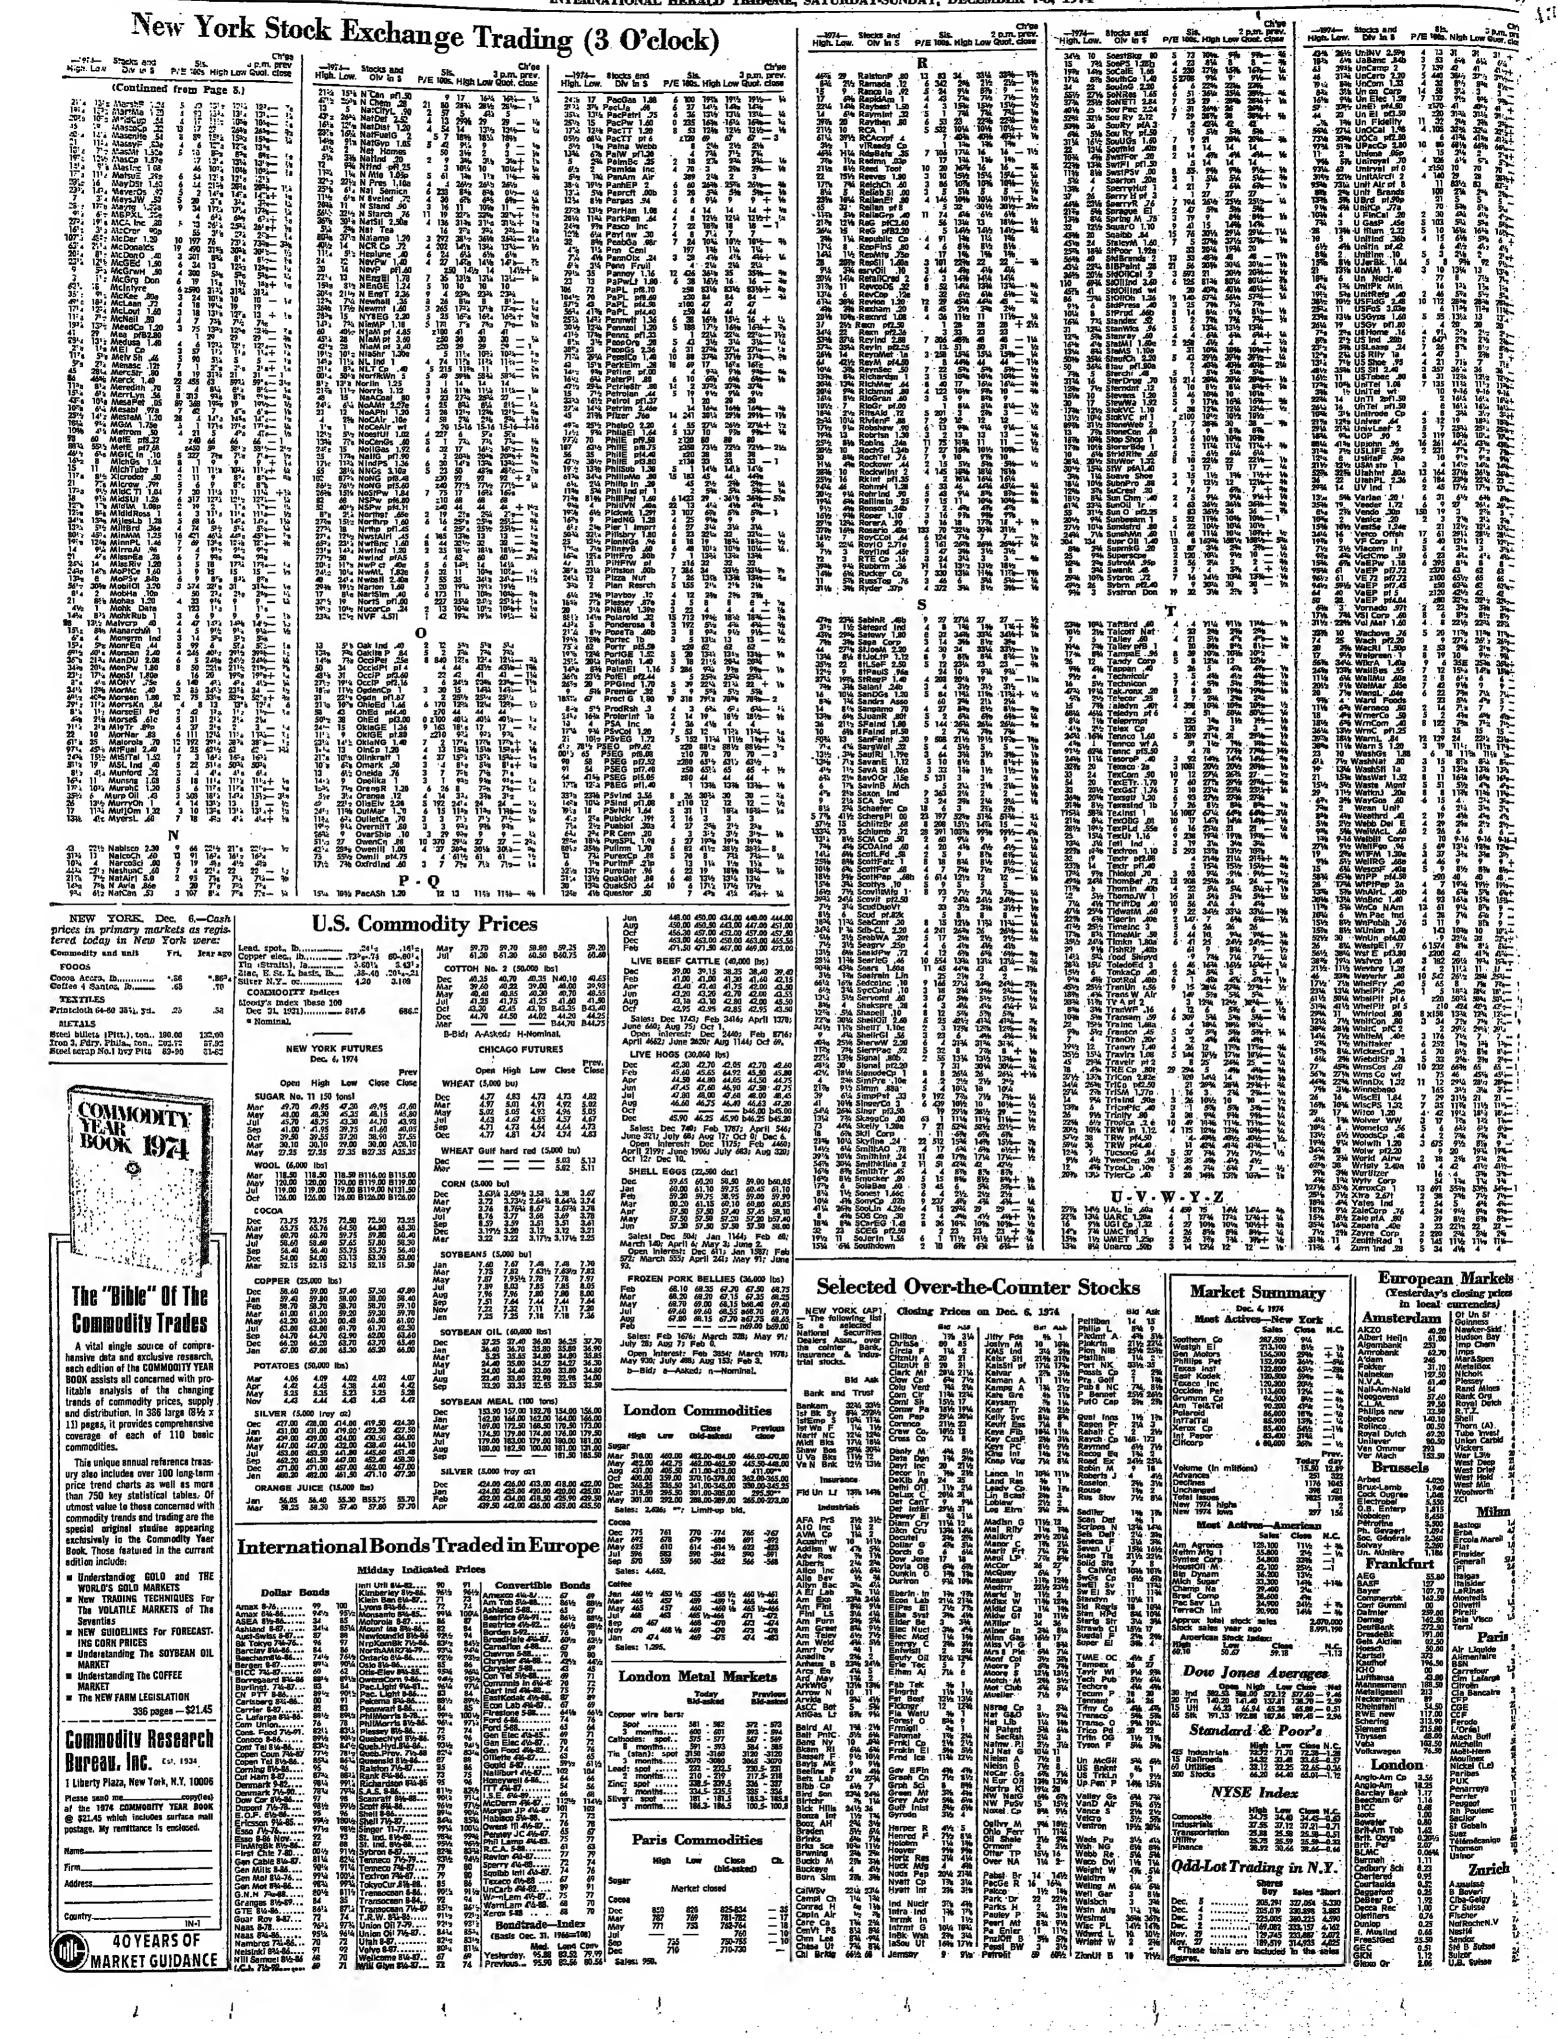

BRUSSELS, Dec. 6 (Reuters'. -Banque de Bruxelles' losses on unauthorized foreign exchange operations, announced in October, will be closer to 1.5 billion france ($40 million) than to the 600 million previously estimated, a spokesman said today.

Final figures for the loss will probably be known in January and it should be possible to estimate net profit for the year ending March 31 during February, the spokesman said.

Terms for the proposed merger between Banque de Bruxelles and Banque Lambert will be set in the light of the known loss figure and the estimated net profit, he

The Destruction of a People

By T.R. Fehrenbach, Knopf. 553 pp. Illustrated. $12.50.

Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haupt

for that one must be profoundly grateful, because one paradoxical result of the hand-wringing and cries of "mea culpa" that throughout the last century or so have been expended over imperialism's westward expansion is that the Indian has been robbed and by designating oppressors and victims, we diminish the tragedy to melodrama strue tragedy is never cowboys and Indians). And by reducing the settlement of the West to melodrams, we shrink the Indian in stature. No. T. R. Febrenbach doesn't make us feel guilty about the Indian. He grants him his dignity. Grants him his dignity. first of all, by choosing to write about those tribes collectively known to themselves as Nermernuh (or True People; each Indian tribe considered itself the "true people," spparently) and to European settlers as Commanches (from the Ute phrase Koh-Maths, or "those who are always against us"-each Indian tribe considered the other tribes the enemies, spparently-which the Spanish wrote down as Komantcia, which in turn became conventionalized as Comanche). Not that Febrenbach regards the Comanches as superior to other tribes, or anything. It just happened to be the Comanches who most proficiently exploited the horse once the Spaniards had introduced it. who most successfully took up the hunting way of life in the Great Plains to the east of the Rockies, who most ferociously resisted the imperial expansion of the Spaniards and Anglo-Americans and who thus most decisively affected the course of

TERE is a book that doesn't try to make us feel guilty about the American Indian. And American history. It happened to be the Comanches who came to represent in the minds of European settlers the untamable savagery of this continent's primitives (in some cases at the fatal expense of less savage and more assimfisble tribes like the Cherokees. who, according to Fehrenbach, were massacred in 1829 in revenge for Comanche maraudings). And so it is on the Comanches that Fehrenbach focuses in what turns out to be s history of all American Indians.

He grants the Indian his dignity, second of all, by clearing up dozens of misconceptions and bringing to light many obscure or forgotten facts and incidents, The Comanches did not wear feathers, for example: Their headdresses were bizarre imitations of buffalo horns: they only began to fashion feathers in the late 19th century, when their culture had lost its confidence and began to imitate other tribes. They scalped and mutilated the enemy dead, for another instance, because they wished them to suffer in the afterlife: and the lengths to which they went tends to be underestimated because of the overmodest reports of Victorian journalists. Their leaders' names were often scat-ological (another fact obscured by blushing journalists.) And furthermore, the great slaughter of their buffalo by white hunters "was neither senseless nor a sport." (William Cody and his hunting parties killed off relatively few); "It was butchery for profit," since raw hides by 1872 brought $3.75 aplece in the industrial market and the bones were ground for fertilizer. "The Anglo-American business ethic destroyed the buffalo." And the Comanches' most deadly enemy was Ranald S. Mackenzie, who, with his Negro "buffalo soldiers." "became and remained the best Indian fighter in the West." though this has been forgotten, perhaps because the "coid, remote, tacitum. utterly professional" Mackenzie "could not fit the image of the standard American hero."

Finally, Febrenbach grants the Indian his dignity by restoring our sense of his tragedy. It was not that anyone was to blame for his destruction, he argues repeatedly throughout his text. "It was not quite true that the Pilgrim Fathers fell first upon their knees and then upon the nearest Indians." It was not that Anglo-American settlers consciously adopted a program of genocide (or Spanish settlers in Mexico either, for that matter; Fehrenbach believes the venslity of the Spaniards has been greatly overrated), or even that anyone was left much choice in the

It was simply that evolution had played a terrible trick, and pitted against each other two civilizations that were thousands of years apart, and wholly unable to understand each other. When you come right down to it, the Comanches were murderous warriors irrespective of how white civilization treated them (they had been fighting and killing long before the settlers arrived as most Indian tribes had been doing Fehrenbach reminds us). They could not cease to be Comanches, and the white settlement could not stop spreading

Of course, Febrenbach does not let the white man off completely. He calls his policy of making and breaking treaties "an ineradicable blot upon the honor of the United States and its officers and citizens." And his writes that "The reservation policies of the government . were the more offensive because they viowere the lated the victors' own codes of decency." But when all is said and done, it is a tragedy of times out of joint that he has recreated in this seamless combination of stirring narrative and weighty analysis. And viewed that way. his marvelous history is all the more moving.

VAL DISERE, France, Dec. 6 [HT].—A committee of the Féd-ration Internationale de Ski nnounced here today that it has oted to disqualify two U.S. men ciers from the next World Cup ant slalom race because of an leged violation of the rules bewe the giant slalom here yes-

Officials of the U.S. team said at they had protested the decion as both unjust and illegal. ate tonight, they expressed opmism about their continuing egotiations, which they describi as "very sensitive now.". Ofcials of FIS. which will rule n the U.S. protest, said in St. coritz. Switzerland, today that ver would try to resolve the ise shortly.

The next men's giant slalom is heduled Dec. 18 in Madonna di ampiglio, Italy.

The two skiers involved are eoff Bruce, 21, of Corning, N.Y., nd Greg Jones, 20, of Tahoe ity, Calif. They were accused having been on the course yes-rday after it was closed to cers of having "shadowed" it -having skied close enough to le course to check the gatesad, finally, of having refused identify themselves to an of-

they had refused to give the complaining official their identi-fication numbers, although Bruce sald he had given his name.

Jones later said that he had not shown his number, which was under his skiing parks, be-cause he felt that "to show it would be to admit my guilt and I believed I was totally in the right. I was totally psyched up for the race and when the official asked to see my number, I didn't know what the rules were."

Both skiers also denied that they had insulted the official, Eric Demets of Italy, the skiing federation's technical director, or chief executive, at the World Cup meeting here. He was talking loudly, Jones said, and "I responded in a mild-ly load way. I definitely did not curse him."

In its protest, the U.S. team told FIS that the proposed penalty was wrong on two major

First, that it was unjust since the two skiers were on the course only five minutes after the closing time of 9:40 a.m. as were, U.S. officials said, "at least 20" competitors from other coun-

Second, that it was illegal since FIS rules state that the penalty for shadowing a course is disqualification from the race involved and not one in the future.

U.S. officials said in their protest that both skiers had been 'vrong and inconsiderate" in refusing to show their numbers and noted that the officials "have apologized for [the skiers'] personal conduct to the technical director."

The protest noted that "there is no FIS rule" against impoliteness "at this time," although it conceded that "this is bad personal relations."

He skied for the University of Cole-rado and was named to the college all-American team in 1973. He ranks second in the United States in the grand slalom and th downhill.

Bruce, who finished 28th, is ranked first in the slalom and downhill and fifth in the giant sialom among U.S. skiera. He was graduated from Holderness prep school in 1971 and is delaying entering college to compete on the international skiing cir-

"We regret the entire incident," Hank Tapher, the U.S. Alpine team director, said, and we have apologized for any impoliteness on our men's part.
"If the committee had disqualified them here and the alleged violation occurred more then an hour before the giant slalom started at 11 a.m.-it had proper procedure available. The disqualification can be asked for the race at hand, but there is no FIS rule that the technical director can request disqualification at a future competition."

A Day Off

Otherwise, today was a day off in World Cup competition, which meant not that everybody went window shopping or sat around hotel lobbies, but that everybody went up and down the slopes

The women's giant sislom is scheduled tomorrow and the men's downhill Sunday. When the weather began turning nasty today, clouds again lowering over the mountains enclosing this village, there was some talk of exchanging the dates since the men's races are the glamour events of world skiing and the men's downhill the most glamorons. The change was later rejected by the coaches, some of NFL Franchises Awarded NEW YORK, Dec. 6 (UPD .-The NFL yesterday voted owner-ship of the new Seattle franchise to a group of businessmen head-ed by Lloyd Nordstrom, and ownership of the new Tampa franchise to Florida attorney Hugh Culverhouse.

The two new teams, the NFL's 27th and 28th will begin play in 1976. Cost for each franchise was $16 million. The Tampa franchise had originally been awarded Oct. 30 to Philadelphia builder Thomas McCloskey, but be requested that his franchise award be withdrawn.

Culverhouse, 55, of Jacksonville, is a prominent figure in banking, land development and real estate. The Seattle franchise will have the Nordstrom family in majority ownership, but lists four additional partners, including Herman Sarkowsky, who is in the process of relinquishing presidency of the NBA Portland Trail Blazers. Sarkowsky will serve as chief operating officer. Other partners are Ned Skin-ner, chairman of Alaska Traitship Corp.; Howard Wright, of the Howard Wright Construcpresident of Payn Save Corp.

Green Bay (6-6) at San Francisco (4-8): Packers coach Dan Devine says he will try another year, despite rough treatment by fans. The 49er running back, Wilbur Jackson, may be NFC rookle of the year. Betting choice: Packers by 1 1/2.

St. Lonis. (9-3) at New Orleans (4-8). Cards have clinched at least wild-card spot but need this one for First Division title since 1948 and spot against Vikings in playoffs. Betting choice: Cards by Atlanta (2-16) at Minnesota (8-4), Falcons have dropped six in a row and will start a rookie quarterback, Kim McQuilken from Lehigh, for a big look before they consider drafting Steve Bartowski, the strong-armed Cal-ifornian. McQuilken completed 13 of 27 for 160 yards, with three interceptions, in relief against Rams, Betting choice: Vikings by 14 points.

Philadelphia (5-7) at Glants (2-10). Bagles ended six-game losing streak against fumbling Packers, 36-14. Glants are buried in four-game losing streak and have won only one of 11 games at Yale Bowl. What new finish will they find this week? Betting choice: Giants by 3.

Washington (8-4) at Los Anseles (9-3). Could be a preview of NFC playoff semifinal. Larry Brown due back in Redskin backfield. A grudge game for Rams, even though they have clinched division crown. Loss to Redskins in 1971 game climinated Los Angeles: from playoffs. Betting choice: Rams by 2 points.

American. Conference Pitisburgh (8-3-1) at New England (7-5), Steelers need victory for Central Division title, but the quarterback situation is still shaky with Terry Brad-shaw's bruised ribs. Patriots skidded after fast etart but could be spoilers against Dol-phins next week. Betting choice: Steelers by 6.1/2, Mismi (9-3) at Baltimore (2-16) Dolphins were fired up for Monday night rout of Cincinnati, which could mean a letdown here. But with former personnel boss Joe Thomas across the field as Colt coach, they've got some-thing. Betting choice: Dolphins by 12 1/2.

Oakland (10-2) at Kansas City (5-7). This used to be the biggle in the AFC. Now it's just a tuneup for Raiders' playoff opener, probably against Dolphins. Betting choice: Oakland by 6. Houston (6-6) at Denver (6-

Just now the women's team, especially in the downhill race, is the stronger half.

"If she skis up to her training levels, she'll be in the top five in any race she starts," Tauber said. "If she doesn't make any mistakes, she is capable of winning any race."

'A Spectacular Placing

Kim Mumford, 19, of Putney, Vt., pleased team officials in Wednesday's race, her first in World Cup competition, by finishing tenth, 1.89 seconds behind the winner. "It was a spectacular placing in her first World Cup race," a U.S. official said, "and the confidence it will give her will do wonders. It was a real good start for her

They are skiing well," Tauber said, but noted that they are starting far back in rankings based on last season's results. Hence, the men skiers in yesterday's giant statom here reported that the snow had been badly rutted by the time they were moving through the gates.

Jones Places 24th Greg Jones, 20, of Tahoe City, Calif., placed highest for the United States in the giant slalom, 24th in a field of 54 who finished both runs. A total of 101 skiers were entered, but the field was -because of both the worn snow and poor visibility as clouds descended on the upper course. Behind Jones were Cary Adgate, 21; of Boyne City, Mich. in 26th place; Geoff Bruce. 21. of Corning, N.Y., 26th, and Andy Mill, 21, of Aspen, Colo., 30th.

drastically reduced by disqualifications and falls

"The men are starting in the 40s, 50s and 60s now," Tauber said, "and we can only hope for results in the 15th to 30th-place area for a while. "But if you take away the first 15 finishers and look only at the others, you'll see that there are few men in the world skiing as well as our people. All four skied the giant slalom very well technically and they are going to pick up points and move ahead in the start and find good snow.

"Very few skiers just come out of nowhere," Tauber continued. "Several of our men are going to do real well in coming years as they gain ex-

'A Sport of Experience'

"Ski racing is a sport of experience as much as anything else," Tauber said. "Our goal is to field a highly trained team which will be capable of victory at all levels of international competition—World Cup; Europa Cup and Can-

The spirit of the team is high, he added, a view supported by the other team officials here: Hanspeter Rohr, the head men's coach: Lane Monroe, the head women's coach; Sylvain Dao-Lena, the special women's coach, and Harald Schonhaar, the special men's coach,

"There is also more communication between and among the teams than there has been for years," an official said. "The women and the men help each other and cheer each other on.

They really seem to care for each other." This has been evident at the races here, where the early finishers have waited for the rest with advice, cheers and occasional consolations.

Home-Field Advantage' "It's as if we're on the away field," Tauber said. "We're skiing 80 per cent of our races away from home. It's not like it's the United States against the world, but in skiing, just as in other sports, there's a home-field advantage. Our skiers are making up for this with their help to each other." The women's team will move on next week to races in Cortina d'Ampezzo, Italy, and the men's team will go to St. Morltz, Switzerland. After two more meetings this month, the team will return to the United States for a week at Christmas, then resume competition in West Germany in early January.

Davis Sent to Texas Rangers

By Joseph Durso

While the owners of baseball's 24 teams met here to discuss expansion, the trading market continued on the sidelines, with Willie Davis yesterday joining the growing list of name players who will change sides in 1975.

Davis, who can hit home runs and also sprint 100 yards in 9.8 seconds, was traded by the Montreal Expos to the Texas Rangers for two lesser lights-Pete MacKanin, an infield pros-pect with meager experience. and Don Stanhouse, a relief pitcher with a "record" of one victory and one defeat last

For Davis, as with many other stars in the game these days, the exchange meant that traveling had secome a way of life on the baseball scene. He played a dozen years with the Los Angeles Dodgers, moved to Montreal a year ago with a salary of $110,000 and led the Expos in hits, runs, doubles, triples and runs batted in.

Mike Marshall Missed Davis, 34, also batted 295 with 12 home runs and 25 stolen bases, although the Expos clearly missed the man sent to Los Angeles in payment—Mike Marshall, who pitched in 106 games this year. But for all his talents. Davis became persona non grata with the Expos after he called a press conference and "demanded assurance" that he would not

The Latest Fashions

WASHINGTON.—There is good Are you sure the Russians aren't news in the fashion world. If you really want to be e welloressed woman this year, you can either go to Dior, Halston, Givenchy, Cardin, Bill Blass or Goodwill Industries.

If you don't find what you want at Saks Fifth Avenue, I recommend the Salvatioo army. What was going through the minds of the fashion designers this year is anybody's guess, but ugly is now beautiful. I'm Dot certam how all these great minds ar- Buchwald rived at the same tawdry clothes, but if they doo't sell this year you can't blame it on the recessioo. In the best of times no woman in her right mind would spend $350 for a dress when there is one exactly like it in her grandmother'a trunk. I am speaking from personal experience. The other day my wife came home with a box. In it was a dress I had seen in "War and Peace" (the war part), a hat from "Bonnie and Clyde" and boots that were worn in "Doctor Zhivago."

After she put them on she said, "What do you think?" "Don't tell me. You got a job as a scrubwoman at the Penta-

A Swede Tackles French Cultural Center

PARIS (IHT).—This week Prime Minister Jacques Chirac invited the French parliament to approve the creation of a vast cultural center in the Beaubourg section of Paris, near Les Halles, to be called the Centre National d'Art et de Culture Georges Pompidou. The vote was in favor of the project, which is just as well, for it is already well under way and will open in 1976.

Beaubourg, as it is popularly called, is a sort of giant Meccano set in steel and glass designed by an Italian-English team of architects and chosen from among 681 projects. It will include Paris's first major public library, a music center under the direction of Pierre Boulez, exhibition space for art works currently housed in the Musee d'Art Moderne and in the Centre National d'Art Contemporain, flexible space for temporary shows, a design center, an art library, a cinémathèque and, near the entrance, a three-dimensional load-bearing wall that will offer constantly changing information: world news, what's going on in Paris, financial reports, traffic jams, the latest films. There will be hanging gardens, escalators. bars and, of course, a restaurant, "Wa talk about the restaurant a lot," says, K.G. Pontus Hulten, Beaubourg's director of

If the public attitude to Beaubourg has been apathetic, as symbolized by parliament's belated approval, with occa-sional sorties into hostility and polemic, those connected with the project talk a lot about everything, eagerly and with contagious enthusiasm. "We all work together, the feeling between departments is not possessive," Mr. Huiten says. Beaubourg's opening show will be an all-department effort, the first of many thematic exhibitions, on the transatiantic cultural exchanges of this century.

"It has no definite title, but two working titles, which is one too many, Mr. Ruiten says. "Officially, we call it Two Continents' and unofficially we call it Ping-Pong."

Pontus Hulten, 50, is a tall and genial Swede who comes to Beaubourg after a brilliant career as the innovating direc-tor of Stockholm's Moderna Museet. In Paris in the '50s he studied art and ethnography (his doctoral thesis at Stockholm had been on Vermeer and Spinoza), made experimental films and organized a kinetic art show in 1855. Because of his friendship with American pop artists, he was able to mount Europe's first pop show in Stockholm, and he has also done shows for the Stedelijk in Amsterdam and "The Machine as Seen at the End of the Mechanical Age" for New York's Museum of Modern Art. His latest book, just published by Pierre Horay in Paris and soon to come out in London and New York, is on the Swiss sculptor Jean Tinguely.

In Stockholm, Mr. Hulten installed a splendid Tinguely machine at the museum's entrance. It functioned when fed a coin and soon had earned enough to finance the purchase of other works. He also mounted a show called "Trains We Have Missed," which featured works the Moderna Museet should have bought. "It was enormously successful on every level," Mr. Hultén says. "It made us able to change our collection profoundly in one year—and just before prices started skyrocketing."

Mr. Hulten hasn't yet seen the Dewest major museum, Washingtoo's Hirschhorn, but says he's heard it's better than critics claim. London's mini-Beaubourg, on the South Bank, he finds dreary: "It has difficult architecture and a hopeless situation in the city. Beaubourg's situation couldn't be better. It's very popular, easy to reach, ethnically complex, a very amusing area."

Paris's present Museum of Modern Art, which most foreigners find a true shocker, has, Mr. Hulten says, ghastly architecture and a ghastly situation in a residential area.

Mr. Hulten may be versed in such with-it terms as "collective memory bank" for museum but he has none of the mandarin attitude of, say, an Andre Malraux who thought to bring culture to the people by putting up replicas of Louvre artworks in a Métro station. Mr. Hultén believes in bringing the people to the museum itself and letting them have fun. which can be accomplished by such simple means as staying open nights. "That changed the atmosphere in Stockholm, the fact that you didn't have to push people out at a certain hour changed relations with the public.

"Beaubourg will be open and welcoming. What's nice about it is it's transparent. You'll see it as a big lamp at night, as transparent by day. I hope that will be an obvious symbol of its approachability.

"There will be a change in attitude. The staff has the view that they are at the service of the artists and the public and not promoted by God to save national treasures. There will be a human presence."

The collection Mr. Hultén inherits from Paris's modern art museum will, he says, look very much better in its new setting. There are big gaps—surrealism, there are very few constructivists, and even expressionism. There's little American art." While French donors will probably wait until Beaubourg is open and successful, Mr. Hulten hopes Americans will fill in some interstices.

Plexibility is a word that Pontus Hulten uses a good deal, both in terms of physical space (the galleries will have morable walls) and in attitude. "We're purely pragmatic, we'll see on the road how things work," he says.

While the idea of a cultural center, so new not long also, is thought out of date by some, Mr. Hulten thinks it still

"It's very necessary to get away from the old museum conception, to bring together literature, film, music and art. I think it works, it has great power as an idea. It also answers a lot of silly questions about is this art because who cares?"

Part of the French public's apathy to Beaubourg may be just the traditional show-me attitude. The hostility is more complex, ranging from the usual chauvinism, suspicion of state sponsored art, and the meretricious connection of Beaubourg with the nearby razing of Les Halles. In fact, little was razed at Beaubourg: its center is on a vacant lot that. resulted from slums having been torn down in 1930 (the section's name, Beao Bourg, was a 19th-century sarcasm on its already sorry state).

Unlike Les Halles, the Beaubourg community has not been destroyed but is being given new life. Neighborhood kids have already had a jazz concert by Don Cherry and Mr. Hulten fought to have the tacky little municipal baths building that sbuts on the new center preserved, and won. Indeed there would seem to be every reason to stand around with Beaubourg's sidewalk superintendents and rejoice.

"It's nice to see something constructive going on thes days," Pontus Hultén says as the huge girders are lifted into place. "Even if there were nothing else, that would be reason enough to fight for it."
